Abstract:

Woodmaven's purpose is simple; we aim to make the process of getting locally made furniture practical. We connect with local carpenters and license our designs to them. Using an online platform, the user orders their chosen furniture piece online, chooses a local carpenter, and picks it up when it's finished. This allows the user to support a local business and receive a piece that has a lower price than at a higher quality than at a traditional furniture store. Our adaptive designs can be made to fit to either a home or office space, and can be modified by adding or subtracting elements to fit the users needs. Woodmaven combines practicality and quality and applies it to a local business model.

Industrialisation has led to products arriving as a clean slate. We aim to bring back the spirit of the product by involving the user in the process of its creation. To achieve this, we have designed modular furniture and will help the user collaborate with local craftsmen to create a piece that is individual, while at the same time supporting a local business.

We are Woodmaven

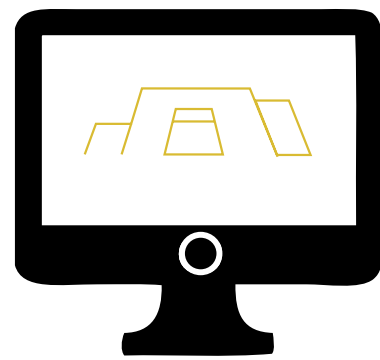

what we do

We work with local carpenters to bring you well designed, sustainable furniture. At the end of the process you will receive custom furniture to suit your needs while supporting your local economy. The possibility of a tax break from this is also possible depending on your region.

community

Once we have sufficiently expanded we plan on creating a community based portion of the website. This will give you the opportunity to send us your own furniture designs, and any that strike our interests will have a chance of being added to our product line. The designer, of course, would be paid per furniture piece sold. We believe in paying people for their designs, and are always interested in new, innovative ideas.
